CAPTAIN HELD HOSTAGE BY PIRATES RESCUED IN DRAMATIC SHOOTOUT

Associated Press

MOMBASA, Kenya U.S. Navy snipers opened fire and killed three pirates holding an American captain at gunpoint in a lifeboat, delivering the skipper unharmed and ending a five-day high-seas hostage drama on Easter Sunday.

The pirates were pointing AK-47s at Capt. Richard Phillips and he was in "imminent danger" of being killed when the commander of the nearby USS Bainbridge made the split-second decision to order his men to shoot, Vice Adm. Bill Gortney said.

Phillips' crew, who said they had escaped the pirates after he offered himself as a hostage, erupted in cheers aboard their ship in Mombasa, Kenya. Some waved an American flag and fired flares in celebration. A lawn sign in the captain's hometown of Underhill, Vt., that read "Pray for Captain Phillips' release and safe return home" was changed to read, "Capt. Phillips rescued and safe."

The U.S. Navy's 5th Fleet said Phillips, 53, was resting comfortably after a medical exam on the San Diego-based USS Boxer in the Indian Ocean off the coast of Somalia. Gortney said the captain had been "tied up inside the lifeboat" over much of the ordeal.

"I'm just the byline. The real heroes are the Navy, the Seals, those who have brought me home," Phillips said by phone to Maersk Line Limited President and CEO John Reinhart, the company head told reporters. A photo released by the Navy showed Phillips unharmed and shaking hands with the commanding officer of the USS Bainbridge.

Gortney said a fourth pirate had been aboard the Bainbridge and negotiating with the Americans immediately before the rescue. The pirate was in military custody and U.S. officials said no decision had been made about how to charge him or where he could stand trial.

The Defense Department twice asked President Obama for permission to use military force to rescue Phillips, most recently late Friday evening, U.S. officials said. On Saturday morning, Obama signed off on

Phillips

WHO IS RICHARD PHILLIPS?

Capt. Richard Phillips is a rabid Boston sports fan, particularly fond of the Celtics, friends and relatives told The New York Times. He drove a cab to help pay his way through college, a friend recalled. He and his wife, Andrea, have two college-age children.

Crew members of the U.S. merchant ship Maersk Alabama on Sunday erupt in cheers after hearing that the captain of their ship had been freed after being held hostage at gunpoint in a lifeboat by Somali pirates.

ROBERTO SCHMIDT/GETTY IMAGES

the Pentagon's request, as he had a day earlier, said the officials, who spoke on the condition of anonymity to discuss internal deliberations.

"I share the country's admiration for the bravery of Capt. Phillips and his selfless concern for his crew," Obama said in his first comments on the situation. "His courage is a model for all Americans."

Crew members said their ordeal had begun Wednesday with the Somali pirates hauling themselves up from a small boat bobbing on the surface of the Indian Ocean far below.

As the pirates shot in the air, Phillips told his crew to lock themselves in a cabin and surrendered himself to safeguard his men, crew members said.

Phillips was then held hostage in an enclosed life-boat that was closely watched by U.S. warships and a helicopter in an increasingly tense standoff.

Talks to free Phillips began Thursday with the captain of the Bainbridge talking to the pirates under instruction from FBI hostage negotiators on board the U.S. destroyer.

The U.S. Navy assumed the pirates would try to get their hostage to shore, where they could have hidden him on Somalia's lawless soil and been in a stronger position to negotiate a ransom. The pirates had threatened to kill Phillips if attacked.

Phillips jumped out of the lifeboat Friday and tried to swim for his freedom but was recaptured when a pirate fired an automatic weapon at or near him, according to U.S. Defense Department officials.

SCENES FROM THE DRAMA

Americans on board the destroyer USS Bainbridge saw the pirates had an AK-47 aimed at Capt. Richard Phillips' back. Navy snipers on the destroyer's fantail took aim at the pirates' heads and shoulders. The commander gave the split-second order: Fire. All three pirates were picked off. The captain was safe.

As for how the crew of the seized Maersk Alabama managed to take one of the pirates hostage though they were unarmed, ATM Reza, a Connecticut father and member of the crew, led one of the pirates into the engine room. There, he says, he stabbed an ice pick into the pirate's hand.

After Phillips was rescued, sailors aboard the Bainbridge passed along a message from his wife, Andrea: "Richard, your family loves you, your family is praying for you, and your family is saving a chocolate Easter egg for you, unless your son eats it first."

It was about midnight on the ocean, Thursday turning to Friday, when Phillips made a break for it, trying to elude his captors. He jumped out of the lifeboat and began to swim for his life. One of the captors fired an automatic weapon—perhaps at Phillips, perhaps only as a warning, either way enough to show that the pirates meant business. Phillips swam back to the lifeboat.

Yep, there's a Twitter feed for that Jesus is on Twitter, and surprisingly he's pretty down-to-earth.

"I've decided to ignore all the sports prayers for the night. Mostly because my teams are winning."

Yes, Jesus, whose Twitter handle is @JesusChrist, has quite the sense of humor. Of course, he's not the real Jesus. At least I don't think so. Although Twitter believers are called followers, so draw your own conclusions.

But real or not, his presence in social media is a reminder that there's a Twitter feed for almost everything—and some of it is pretty out there.

I wonder if @JesusChrist follows @secrettweet, which is pretty much the equivalent of a Twitter confessional. You post your secrets anonymously to secrettweet.com and they're shared with the cyber universe.

Some of what you see on @secrettweet is funny, but some of it is really dark and clearly an escape for some people. Examples include:

» "I've been thinking about letting my cats 'escape' so we can cut $30 on our rent. hate this economy. Feel horrible."

» "i find myself sleeping with men. I wonder what my wife would say?"

Weird, right? Well then there's @dreamtweet, which is like @secrettweet in that it's anonymous, but here people post their dreams.

According to the site, it's integrated with Twitter and created for users to share their dreams and nightmares with the world.

So while you could go to a therapist to ask what it means when an octopus chases you, catches you and wraps you up with all eight tentacles, you could save a bunch of money talking about it on Twitter.

And if that's not weird enough, you could follow @PIMPY3WASH, a washing machine that tweets whenever a load of laundry is done. But it's not any old washing machine, it's one belonging to TiVo senior programmer Ryan Rose, who modified the 25-year-old model to remind him not to leave the clothes in too long.

For not having much to say—all the tweets are pretty much the same, something along the lines of "laundry finished washing at: Mon Mar 30 07:47:24 2009"—the machine has more than 500 followers. So either these people are fascinated by an old washing machine that can tweet or they really care about Rose's underwear.

Do you know of any weird Twitter feeds? Tweet me, poke me—just tell me. Anonymity is OK too.

BOILING POINT

Melee breaks loose at courthouse after cop charged in deadly crash granted bail

Chicago Tribune

A raucous confrontation broke out Sunday outside Cook County Criminal Court after a Chicago police detective charged with causing a deadly auto crash while driving drunk was ordered released on $500,000 bail.

The fight highlighted the outrage underlying the case. As they streamed out of the hearing, many of the friends and relatives of the young victims were shouting and crying, angered that Joseph Frugoli, an 18-year veteran of the Chicago Police Department, would be set free while the case makes its way through court.

"If I hit your kids, it would be a different story!" one man shouted as Cook County Sheriff's officers created a human barrier on the front steps of the courthouse.

"Only $500,000—that's what two lives are worth?!" yelled another member of the crowd, referring to Andrew Cazares, 23, and Fausto Manzera, 21, the two men killed in the fiery crash.

The stand-off came after the prosecutor and defense attorney laid out new claims about the crash and Frugoli—some of them conflicting.

Frugoli, a burly man who appeared in court in jeans and a long-sleeve polo shirt, was released from custody Sunday after posting $50,000, 10 percent of the bail, said Steve Patterson, a spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff's Office.

The crash occurred around 3:30 a.m. Friday on the southbound Dan Ryan after Cazares pulled his car over to wait for help, possibly with a flat tire.

John Dillon, an assistant Cook County state's attorney who sought an "extremely high bond," said Frugoli's blood-alcohol level was 0.277—more than three times the legal limit for driving—when his SUV crashed into the car, and that he was driving between 60 and 65 mph, which was above the speed limit.

According to witness accounts, Dillon said, the impact of the crash propelled the car forward as if it "had been shot from a cannon" and to explode like "a bomb went off."

When officials from the Illinois Department of Transportation arrived, Frugoli tried to flee the scene on foot until he was stopped by an official from the department, Dillon said.

Frugoli's defense attorney, Gregg Smith, said the car was stopped in the right-hand lane with its lights off, not pulled off to shoulder, as the prosecution said. Smith said there was no proof that Frugoli was speeding, and that he was not trying to flee when he started to walk away from the scene.

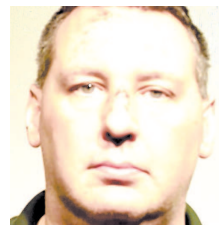

"My client was disoriented," Smith said.

Frugoli, he insisted, "wasn't trying to evade arrest."

Smith portrayed Frugoli as a committed police officer born and raised in Chicago whose strong family ties prevented him from being a flight risk.

LOOKING BACK

John Dillon, an assistant Cook County state's attorney, said Joseph Frugoli, who has been relieved of his police powers, had a history of driving dangerously, pointing to a 2005 crash and a 1990 speeding ticket.

Last week, a Cook County judge ordered Frugoli to pay more than $7,000 in damages in a civil case involving the 2005 crash, in which Frugoli struck a 61-year-old man's vehicle from behind on the Dan Ryan. Frugoli, who denied consuming alcohol before the crash, was cited for failure to reduce speed, but the ticket was dropped.

CTA, Cricket ink deal

Cricket Communications has signed a 10-year agreement to lease the CTA's wireless communications infrastructure in the Red Line and Blue Line subways, CTA officials will announce Monday. The transit agency will be paid $22,250 per month by Cricket, officials said. Cricket joins Verizon Wireless and U.S. Cellular in offering wireless service in the subway. The CTA expects to add more service providers to the system, allowing more customers to use their wireless devices underground, officials said.

Mob secrets leaked?

Once known as a tireless bloodhound who tracked down fugitive gang leaders, deputy U.S. marshal John Ambrose now faces years behind bars if he is convicted of betraying his oath and leaking secrets to the mob. Ambrose, 50, is due to go on trial Monday for tipping off organized crime figures that a so-called made member of the Chicago mob had switched sides. Ambrose denies he ever broke the law in handling secret information.

2 sought in Logan Square shooting

Chicago police said Sunday they are searching for two men who opened fire Saturday on another vehicle driven by a 58-year-old woman on her way to work in Logan Square. The woman was hit by a bullet, but it did not penetrate her skin, said News Affairs Officer Laura Kubiak. She did suffer a bruise and declined treatment from paramedics. The incident occurred before 8 a.m. in the 2100 block of North Kedzie Avenue, Kubiak said.

Bo knows the Obamas

8 WASHINGTON There's a new top dog in Washington, and his name is Bo.

As rumored, the Obamas settled on a first pet—a 6-month-old Portuguese water dog that the Obama girls are naming Bo.

The grand puppy unveiling had been scheduled for Tuesday, but on Saturday night The Washington Post broke the tightly held news that President Obama's daughters, Malia and Sasha, picked the black and white pup. The dog is a gift from Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) who owns several Portuguese water dogs himself.

White House aides told The Associated Press that the office of the first lady arranged an exclusive deal on the dog story with the Post.

On Easter Sunday, Obama and his fam-

WHY BO?

The Washington Post reported that Obama's daughters chose the name Bo for the pup because First Lady Michelle Obama's father was nicknamed Diddley. The name for the dog was an apparent reference to singer "Bo" Diddley.

The Obama family has adopted Bo, a 6-month-old Portuguese water dog.

ily took communion as they celebrated Easter at St. John's Church in Washington in their first public worship service since the inauguration.

Located across from the White House, St. John's Church is popular with presidents. Former President George W. Bush often attended services, and church history contends that every president since James Madison, the nation's fourth chief executive, has visited.

Governor tours tornado damage

1 Tennessee Gov. Phil Bredesen on Saturday viewed damage in Murfreesboro and other areas hit by severe storms that spawned tornadoes across the Southeast, killed three and injured dozens. AP PHOTO

Shocked by killing

2 Police and residents of Tracy, Calif., were shocked to learn Sunday that the suspect in the killing of an 8-year-old girl found stuffed into a suitcase turned out to be a woman, the mother of the slain girl's best friend.

The weapon divide

3 Stopping the flow of money and weapons from the U.S. into Mexico is critical to dealing with the violent drug cartels creating havoc on the border, the Mexican ambassador to the U.S. said Sunday.

Skiping out

4 Authorities in Flint, Mich., say a man fathered 14 children with 13 different women and owes more than $530,000 in unpaid child support.

Pope's Easter message

5 Pope Benedict XVI sought to give a message of hope on Easter Sunday to victims of wars, poverty and financial turmoil, saying it was urgently needed to overcome the miseries that are plaguing Africa, the Middle East and other parts of the globe.

Kangaroo problem

6 They bounce across the roof of Parliament House. They collide with cars. They come in through the bedroom window. Canberra, Australia's capital, has a problem—too many kangaroos. But a government survey has found that more than 80 percent of Canberra residents think the wild kangaroos should stay.

DIGIT

30,000

7 Parishioners at a church in Vasteras, Sweden, celebrated Easter on Sunday by unveiling a 6-foot-tall statue of Jesus that they had built out of 30,000 Lego blocks.

Thailand state of emergency

9 BANGKOK An anti-government protester kneels in front of Thai soldiers Sunday. Swarms of protesters on Sunday attacked the prime minister's car, seized control of major intersections and commandeered buses, bringing new chaos to the Thai capital as the country's leader threatened to return from exile to lead a revolution. AP

Wanted: Tall women for toilet test

10 MADISON, Wis. If you are a female about 5 feet 8 inches tall, 140 pounds and willing to stick your head in a toilet, a northern Wisconsin prosecutor wants your help in proving a high-profile homicide case.

The Vilas County district attorney plans to recruit volunteers for a second round of controversial tests designed to prove that a woman was drowned by her husband in a toilet—and didn't commit suicide as he claims.

The experiments involve positioning women the size of the late Genell Plude of Land O' Lakes at a toilet to determine whether the version of events told by her husband, Douglas Plude, is plausible.

Defense lawyers say it's junk science.

Plude, 42, was convicted of first-degree intentional homicide in 2002. But the Wisconsin Supreme Court threw out the conviction last year after learning that an expert witness who conducted the first round of toilet tests exaggerated his credentials. Plude has been released from prison pending the second trial, which is expected to begin in October.

CUBS HITS CUBS 8, MILWAUKEE 5

» The Cubs got some welcome news on the ailing right shoulder of catcher Geovany Soto on Sunday, and now expect him to return to the lineup Wednesday. Cubs manager Lou Piniella said Soto could be available as a pinch-runner or pinch-hitter earlier, but only in an emergency.

Sox win in the end

Chicago Tribune

White Sox starting pitchers finished the first homestand of the year with a 2.29 ERA, including Mark Buehrle's stellar Sunday outing against the Twins in a 6-1 victory.

"If we continue to pitch like we have, this ballclub will be interesting," manager Ozzie Guillen said. "This division, this league is about pitching and health. Everybody's got a good lineup. You pitch well, you win."

Bobby Jenks saved the day after Clayton Richard loaded the bases with no outs in the ninth. Jenks came on to strike out Joe Crede and induce a game-ending double play.

The Sox start a road trip Monday but stay within the Central Division with three in Detroit.

SOX HITS

Dewayne Wise, who started the season in an 0-for-12 slump, was the only White Sox hitter to have a multi-hit game, with two singles. He's 4-for-7 over his last two starts.

» Chris Getz left after getting a hit. He has a contusion on his right triceps and is day-to-day. AP

It's time to take a sneak peek at the new-look Cubs—Whizzer-style

By Whizzer

Thanks to Milton Bradley, it's a whole new game on the North Side. Ugh. Bad puns aside, the Big MB—that's what I call him—makes things a lot more interesting for the Cubs this year. He could be the missing piece the Cubs have been searching for the past few years (you know, like the Monopoly thimble that has been MIA since 1994).

OK, I'm done with the board game jokes. Or am I? Here now, my predictions for your 2009 Cubbies.

The Whiz quiz

Think you know your stuff? Test your sports smarts against RedEye's prognosticating pooch, Whizzer. The Cubs opened the season last year at Wrigley Field against the Brewers. How did that game turn out? Text "cubs" and the number of your answer to 87708. I'll text ya back to tell you if you got the answer right or wrong.

OPENING DAY

Alfonso "The Fonz" Soriano leads off with ... a strikeout, of course. But then he'll redeem himself by making contact in the second, but flying out to the shortstop, then ... just joking, Fonz. I jumped the shark with that one. The leadoff man is on a hot streak and will keep it going with another big day against Colorado as the Cubs win 7-2.

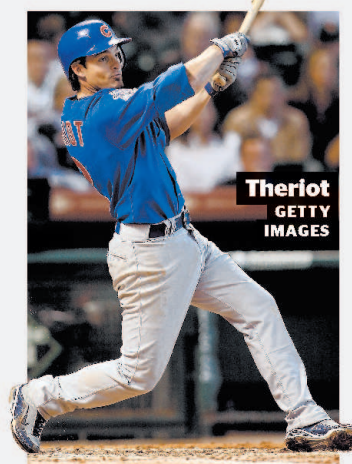

WORLD SERIES

Baby steps, people. Baby steps. As Cubs fans, we have to take things slowly, that's why I say Lou Piniella and Co. fall to the Yankees in the World Series. They are even more loaded than the Cubs with CC Sabathia and A.J. Burnett giving N.Y. some real pitching for a change. It'll be a learning experience for the Cubs. Dare I say it? Wait till next year.

PLAYOFFS

I can't believe I'm actually saying this, but I see the Cubs reversing their last two playoff appearances and sweeping through the first round and topping the defending champion Phillies to make it to the World Series. Crazy, I know, but the Cubs are armed to the teeth.

Theriot
GETTY IMAGES

RECORD

I'll make it easy on myself and say 100-62. On paper, the Cubs look better than the team that went 97-65 last season. The addition of Bradley gives them the left-hander they need and the development of Ryan "The Riot" and Mike Fontenot ... oh, look at me getting all technical. I'm just guessin' here. A full year of Rich Harden makes the difference.

1 Why can't we get a sunny and warm baseball home opener for the Cubs or Sox?	Because this year's sacrifice to the weather gods was a tray of Miller Lites and a Kosuke Fukudome headband.	Excuse me Answer Guy, but you do realize the Cubs and Sox play IN CHICAGO!?	That's not rain, it's Ronnie Woo-Woo spitting on you.	Hello, this is the Cubs. Even Mother Nature beats them down.	Try playing on ice all season, wimps.
2 Why is there a Captain Morgan Club at Wrigley Field now?	It was either that or the Kleenex Club.	Ahem, see answer No. 1.	The Captain likes to pose. And don't we usually find out in October the Cubs are posers too?	Beer before liquor: After you leave the Bud Light bleachers, you do the hard stuff.	Because this year, Cubs fans will need some strong stuff to douse their disappointment.
3 The Blackhawks' regular season is in the books. Rate their performance.	Solid B-plus. NOW HIT SOMEBODY!	Oh, wait, that's that team that plays in Wrigley when it snows, right?	Nine out of 10. I'm jamming to "Chelsea Dagger" by the Fratellis. If only my co-host knew this team existed!	I give them 8 bags on my 10-bag scale.	A perfect 10. A reason to raise a glass and celebrate.
4 The Blackhawks and Bulls in the playoffs is like Bret Michaels and Tommy Lee dating the same woman. I don't know what that means. It just sounds right.	... it's as if a tree had fallen in the woods.	... meters fixed and potholes filled. Something that should ALWAYS occur but you can't count on.	... the Cubs and Sox in the playoffs, only more surprising—and eventually heartbreaking.	... Leo and Bag Boy getting lucky on a Friday night. Happens once in a blue moon.
5 How would you react if the Bulls become the sixth-best team in the Eastern Conference?	With an utter lack of surprise. The Atlanta Hawks are in fourth, people.	Oh, wait, did something make a sound?	I'm reserving Grant Park now!	I'd buy my tickets for Orlando. Disney, here I come. Hope they let me in with the bag this time.	A milestone to cheer. Too bad the sixth team in the West is 1,000 times better.

Phil Mickelson and Tiger Woods shake hands Sunday during the final round of the Masters. They finished fourth and fifth, respectively. MCT

THE MASTERS

A pair of chokers

Angel Cabrera won the Masters on Sunday on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff, but the real fireworks came earlier in the round when Phil Mickelson and Tiger Woods—paired together—charged toward the leaders. In the end, however, both choked away their chance at the green jacket. Here's how.

Phil Mickelson

Lefty tied a Masters record with a 6-under 30 on the front side, but he had two major blunders on the back side. His tee shot at No. 12 rolled back into Rae's Creek, leading to a double bogey, and he missed a 4-footer for eagle at the 15th, squandering a chance to pull into a tie for the lead. He finished the day fourth.

Tiger Woods

Woods started rolling with a 30-foot eagle at No. 8, and he pulled even with Mickelson with a birdie at the tricky 16th. He bogeyed the 17th and 18th to limp into fifth place.

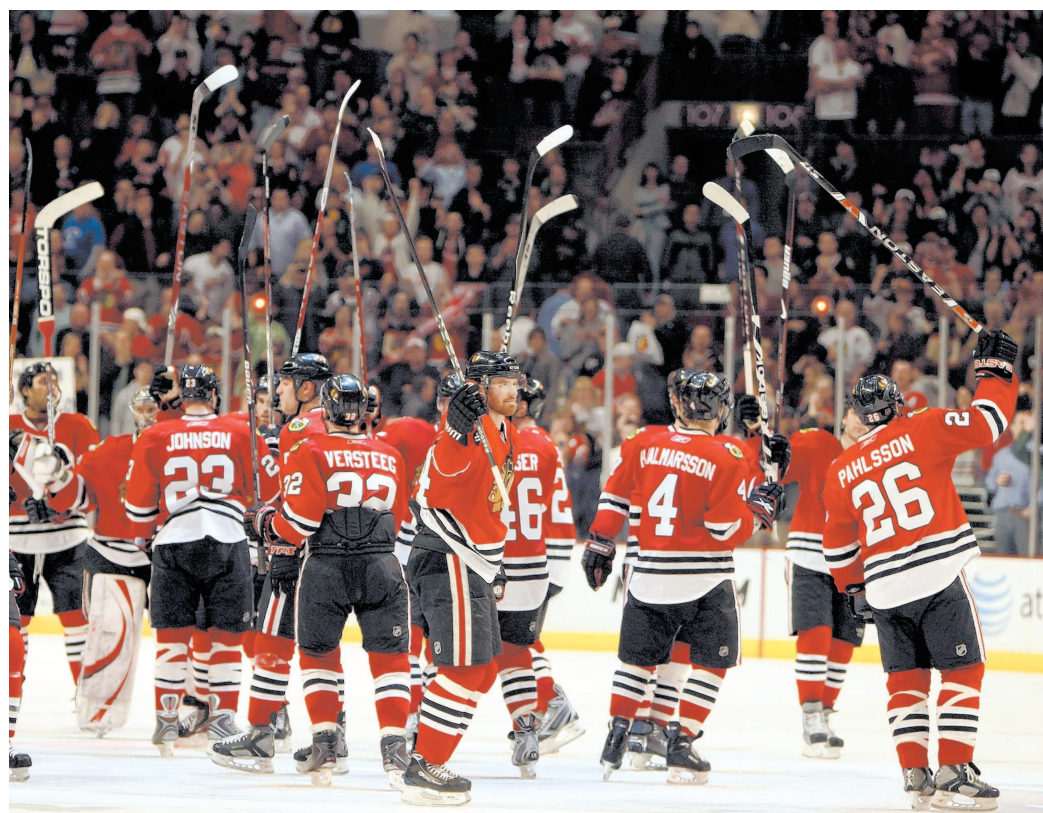

HOMETOWN HITS

The Bulls have tied the 2002-03 team's franchise record by playing nine overtime games. They're 2-7 this season and went 1-8 in 2002-03. » Ben Gordon had his ninth 30-point game Saturday, when he scored 39. He has led the Bulls in scoring 40 times.

Her Northwestern teammates could see Hilary Bowen dressed in street clothes Sunday at Lakeside Field. Bowen had dumped her crutches two days earlier, but the leading goal scorer in Division I women's lacrosse was limping so severely it was apparent the left knee ligament she had torn a week earlier would sideline her for weeks, if not the rest of the season. Yet the Wildcats (13-0) seemed almost in denial about Bowen's absence for the first 10 minutes against No. 17 Penn State (6-7). It seemed they were waiting for her to take the field, falling behind 3-0 before rolling to a 17-6 victory.

The Blackhawks salute the United Center crowd Sunday after 3-0 win over the Detroit Red Wings in their final regular-season game. SCOTT STRAZZANTE/TRIBUNE

BLACKHAWKS 3, DETROIT 0

Blackhawks finish strong

The Blackhawks closed a chapter of the 2008-09 regular season Sunday. Unlike recent history, though, there's more to this story.

It was a campaign that featured the firing of a popular head coach after just four games, a franchise-record nine-game winning streak, an outdoor contest played on a baseball diamond and the clinching of the Hawks' first playoff berth since 2002.

Consider those learning experiences for later this week, when what players often refer to as "the real season"—the Stanley Cup playoffs—will begin.

But first the Hawks had a little unfinished business to attend to, as they defeated the Detroit

STANLEY CUP PLAYOFFS BLACKHAWKS VS. CALGARY FLAMES

Game 1: Thursday

Time TBA

Red Wings 3-0 on Sunday in front of a roaring crowd of 22,376 at the United Center.

Goaltender Nikolai Khabibulin provided one of the season's top performances by stifling the high-octane Wings with 37 saves in his third shut-out of the season and 41st of his career.

Andrew Ladd, Jonathan Toews and Dave Bolland provided the scoring as the Hawks finished the regular season 46-24-12.

"We got the first step; that was making the playoffs and home-ice [advantage]," center Sammy Pahlsson said. "Now we have to be our best. It doesn't matter what we did before this. It's all about the playoffs."

ONE-LINERS

» Alex Rodriguez will report Monday to the New York Yankees' Spring Training complex in Tampa, Fla., to continue his rehabilitation from right hip surgery and is expected to be at the Yankees' game at Tampa Bay that night. » The Pittsburgh Pirates pulled off their first triple play in 16 years in the eighth inning of their game against the Cincinnati Reds on Sunday. » The U.S. defended its women's World Hockey Championship title Sunday, beating Canada 4-1 behind defenseman Caitlin Cahow's two goals.

Quadruple play

Four new things we're psyched about in Wrigleyville

By Lisa Arnett

For a 'hood known for its staunch tradition, Wrigleyville's really shaking up this season with new stuff. Bat around these four news bites over peanuts and beer to show your fellow fans how in tune you are with what's up in the land of the Cubs.

OPENING DAY BASHES

The Cubs play the Colorado Rockies at 1:20 p.m. at Wrigley Field (1060 W. Addison St.). Log on to metromix.com for parties celebrating the Cubs' home opener.

1 A new Wrigley Field bar

Wrigley Field hasn't been christened with a new name thanks to corporate sponsorship (yet), but the shiny new sports bar replacing the Friendly Confines Cafe has. Dubbed Captain Morgan Club and operated by the Harry Caray Restaurant Group, the bar opens at 8 a.m. Monday, with Captain Morgan himself spreading the brand-name cheer. This open-air sports bar for up to 500 will stay open year-round, putting up walls for winter. Don't expect the same menu as Harry Caray's Tavern, though—the brief lineup here includes five sandwiches, two salads, hot dogs and nachos. Find it at the southeast corner, near Addison Street and Sheffield Avenue.

Quick hit: The bar's few specialty drinks aren't anything to cheer about (ready to order a $7 Captain Cubby made with the namesake rum and Pepsi?), but entrances from both the field and the street allow meet-ups between game watchers and their non-ticketholding pals.

2 TBOX, baseball season-style

Last December, more than 6,000 bargoers donned holiday get-ups to prance around Wrigleyville in single-digit weather during the 13th annual Twelve Bars of Christmas (TBOX) pub crawl. This spring, hit the streets for Cover Your Bases, a baseball-themed crawl planned for April 25 by Chris Festa, owner of Festa T-Shirts and the force behind TBOX. While we suspect the drunk Santa count will be significantly lower, the concept's equally kitschy: Begin at Rebel (3462 N. Clark St. 773-975-2010) and suit up in a shirt featuring all nine baseball positions. Tour eight other nearby bars in 50-minute time slots, collecting a sticker to slap on your shirt at each stop. $12 includes T-shirt and $2.50 Miller Lite bottles or drafts at participating bars. 1:30 p.m. April 25. Tickets: shop-festa.com/coveryourbases. View the bar itinerary on metromix.com.

Quick hit: Players who (literally) cover their bases can enter to win Cubs tickets and return to Rebel for a closing bash (10:30 p.m.).

3 Monster cocktails on Clark Street

Need a fresh post-game hang? Hit up The Stretch Bar & Grill (3485 N. Clark St. 773-755-3980). NoChance Productions (the folks behind Goodbar and Cortland's Garage) gave the old Tryst address a face-lift, covering the walls with sleek cedar planks and stocking the bar with Mason jars to serve cocktails ranging from classic (the half-tea, half-lemonade Arnold Palmer) to funky (the 3 Olives Root Beer, made with root beer-flavored vodka, amaretto, Galliano herbal liqueur, cola and cream). Choose between a 16-ounce ($8-$10) and an extra-large 32-ounce size ($14-$18). That's a full quart, people!

Quick hit: Fun updates on classic American eats (created by Jim August, known for his cooking at Cafe le Coq in Oak Park) include chili made with braised short ribs, triple-decker grilled cheese and playful desserts such as Twinkie truffles and Cracker Jack ice cream.

4 Rockit expands north

Get ready for Rockit, the sequel, opening as early as the week of April 20 in the former Tuscany space (3700 N. Clark St. 773-645-4400). Though this second location will be more intimate than the original Rockit's lofty space, you still can expect those trusty antler chandeliers, a two-level layout, weekend brunch, patio seating for 80-plus and even some of the same staff.

Quick hit: Billy Dec, CEO of operating company Rockit Ranch Productions, tells us he hopes to continue to replicate Rockit around town, tweaking the concept to fit the 'hood. Here, that means a kids' menu. Next up? Maybe Wicker Park or Bucktown, says Dec.

"It's the Midwest vibe. In the Midwest people will give their seats up for anybody, and it's just a kinder atmosphere."
—Tyson Ritter of The All-American Rejects on playing Chicago

All-American dreams

By Matt Kuhn
FOR REDEYE

With a name like The All-American Rejects, you would think this quartet of twenty-something pop-rockers are slackers—breezing in and out of the studio when record execs and fans yearn for another song.

That's not the case for these Oklahoma boys, who aren't trying to impress anyone except themselves.

For the past four months, All-American Rejects have been hard at work finishing their third full-length release, shooting music videos, re-inventing Britney Spears' "Womanizer" for a Yahoo campaign (YouTube that one) and rehearsing for their first national headlining tour. So when RedEye asked lead singer/bassist Tyson Ritter what he was doing hours before he hit the stage in Kansas City, he said, "Just, uh, relaxing."

The band has earned relaxation time after spending 2 1/2 years on the road while writing the follow-up to their album "Move Along," in addition to spending another six months recording their latest, "When the World Comes Down."

Smashing onto the pop-rock scene in 2003 with their hit single "Swing, Swing," AAR won hearts in 2005 with "Move Along," "Dirty Little Secret" and the prom-theme rock ballad, "It Ends Tonight." But the Rejects felt they needed to approach the new album a bit differently than past efforts.

"We had to push ourselves to a brink, and it definitely teetered on this whole thing imploding—and I feel like you have to go there every time," Ritter said. "With 'Move Along,' it was kind of us versus the label—this time it was kind of us versus ourselves."

The Rejects' first single off the new record, "Gives You Hell," hit No. 1 on Top 40 radio and has been downloaded more than 1.7 million times. Plans for dropping the next single are in the works; the band just finished shooting the video for "The Wind Blows."

"Yeah, we just did the video and it's gonna be a sexy bastard," Ritter said, laughing. "It's gonna be the video where the Rejects show a little bit of their 'chesticles.' It gets pretty hot and heavy."

"When the World Comes Down" shows a different side of the Rejects—infusing orchestral arrangements, acoustic guitars paired with auxiliary instruments, choir-inspired backing vocals and a first-time male/female duet.

"Our producer, Erik Valentine, has such an eclectic nature, which melded great with our eclectic nature," Ritter said. "This is the record we put every bit of our life source into and it's finally happening. It's finally our turn."

"The 'I Wanna Rock Tour' is going to be up close and personal. We hope this is the tour Rejects fans will brag about seeing for years to come."

COME ON DOWN!

BECOMING NEXT CONTESTANT IS NO TRIVIAL PURSUIT

By Leonor Vivanco
REDEYE

The category is "Chicago game show contestants" for $800.

The answer: Last March, she arrived for a taping of a game show without enough cash to pay her cab fare to Navy Pier but ended up $38,000 richer.

The correct question: Who is Erika Kokkinos?

Kokkinos, a Northwestern University graduate, said she persuaded the cab driver to believe she was a trustworthy person, telling him she was about to compete on College Week's "Wheel of Fortune."

"I went in with the mentality [that] I'm in it to win it," said Kokkinos, 22, a video production coordinator who lives in Lakeview. She was right. On her first spin she won $10,000. "From there, I was like, 'Hell yeah! This is mine,'" she said.

And it was. That day she won trips to Australia and Iceland. She also paid the cab driver that night.

"Am I the luckiest person on Earth? Yes, definitely," she said.

So how can you, too, get lucky?

To find out, RedEye went behind the scenes with past game show contestants and casting producers and learned about the application process, auditions and contestants' preparations for the main event. And, of course, what it's like to win. Game shows traditionally are TV ratings winners and have been popular for years. They are getting even more buzz now thanks to Oscar winner "Slumdog Millionaire" and new shows including MTV's "The Phone," which starts later this month. What's so fascinating about game shows?

"These are regular people and they're on network TV, and that's compelling because most of us are regular people," said Michael Niederman, chairman of the TV department at Columbia College Chicago. "We identify with them."

Not only do we identify with them, but we also play along with them. So if you think you're smarter than a 5th grader and want to try to prove it, take notes.

LIVANCO@TRIBUNE.COM

GETTING ON

Don't just try to get on any game show. Go after the game you can play the best, said Scott Sternberg, executive producer of game shows including "Catch 21" on the Game Show Network and "The Gong Show."

Good at solving word puzzles? Try "Wheel of Fortune." Remember random facts? Apply for "Who Wants to be a Millionaire?"

Check the show's Web site to find out how to apply and when and where nationwide casting calls are held. ("Jeopardy!" for example periodically offers an online test.)

Most have similar eligibility rules: Contestants should be at least 18 years old, should not have appeared on that game show before or within a specific time frame and should not have been on a game show, dating show or reality show in the last year—or three shows in the last 10 years.

But be warned: After applying, it's possible not to hear back for months, if at all.

No application is necessary for "The Price Is Right." Brooks Osman, 37, who moved from Wrigleyville to Maryland in December, flew to California in March 2007 with a free ticket to the show taping.

The show overbooks and ticketed fans who get there first are seated first. So Osman said he arrived from his hotel to CBS Studio in L.A. at 4:45 a.m. and waited in line 11 hours for the 4 p.m. show, jumping around to get noticed.

He not only got a seat, but he also made it down to contestant row and on stage—still jumping with excitement.

"Having that energy level, being fun and just being myself, I think they look for that," Osman said.

On the show, he bid on and won three prizes, but didn't make it to the Showcase Showdown.

SCREENING THE TALENT

Potential contestants lucky enough to get an e-mail or call back are invited to an audition where they take another test, are interviewed and play a simulated game, past contestants told RedEye. After that, they are entered into the contestant pool—essentially a wait list—for 18 months.

At auditions, casting producers are looking for passionate and energetic contestants, Sternberg said. They want someone the viewer can love or love to hate, he said. Producers also look at how well contestants play the game and answer questions under pressure. For example, can they play to win but still show compassion for fellow competitors?

Streeterville resident Julie Bartoszek, 22, knew the audition was her only chance to wow "Wheel" producers. She passed a fill-in-the-blanks test, spun a wheel and called out letters. In the process, she said, she transformed herself into Miss Personality.

"They're looking for somebody who could think quick on their feet, be loud and have high energy and essentially smile the whole time," said Bartoszek, who won $13,439 in cash and prizes, including a trip to Mexico.

PREPARATIONS

What's harder, preparing for the Illinois Bar Exam or "Jeopardy!"?

Past contestant Deepak Tamasker's answer: the game show, because "it's an unlimited universe."

He almost didn't get the chance to find out, however. He got a call from the show two weeks before his all-important law exam and had to decline the opportunity to appear.

"I figured this [was] my chance. I blew it," said Tamasker, a 31-year-old attorney living in Avondale. Luckily, he received an invitation again several months later to come on the show and accepted.

Though he didn't study quite as hard as he did for the bar, he crammed information from an almanac and practiced "buzzing in" using a click-pen.

His practice paid off. He won two games and $25,401 on episodes that aired in February.

Another "Jeopardy!" contestant, Matt Kohlstedt, flipped through trivia books, studied lists of books and authors and brushed up on Inauguration Day trivia because his episode was set to air around the time Barack Obama was sworn into office.

The 28-year-old Northwestern alum from La Grange—now living in Washington, D.C.—also exercised on his roadbike trainer while answering questions to see how well he could do with his adrenaline pumping.

Deepak Tamasker

"I think I put a lot of pressure on myself. I really did want to win," Kohlstedt said.

Maybe it paid off. He won five games for a total of $79,803, plus another $10,000 in the Tournament of Champions.

THE BIG PAYOFF

Not everybody who competes on a game show walks away a winner. And not all winners walk away with cash.

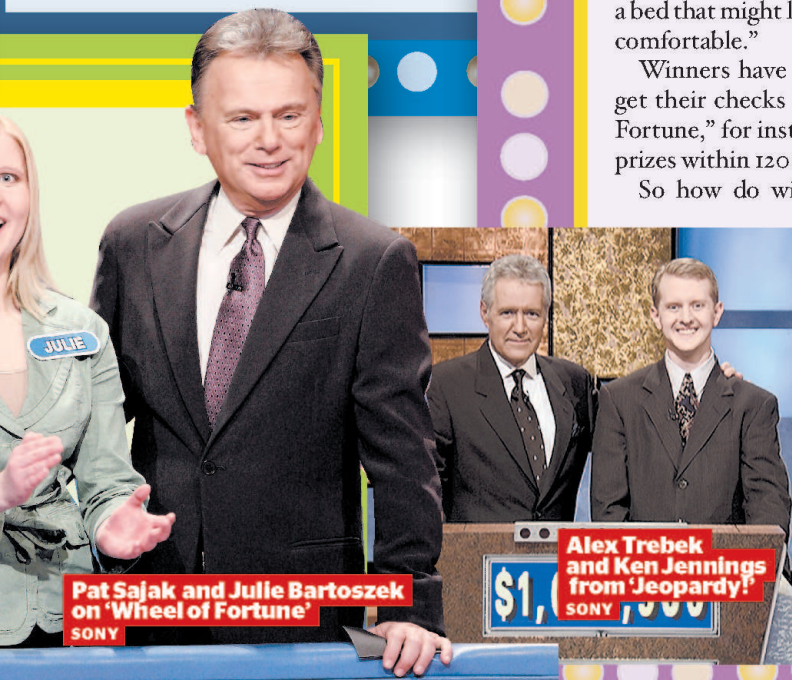

On "The Price Is Right," Osman correctly guessed the price of camping gear and Bowflex weight set. He won a bed—which he kept—but gave away the weights to a buddy. "I didn't win a car, money or a trip," he said. "I have a bed that might last me the rest of my life, which is super-comfortable."

Winners have to pay taxes on prizes, and might not get their checks right after taping the show. "Wheel of Fortune," for instance, says winners receive their cash or prizes within 120 days after the show airs.

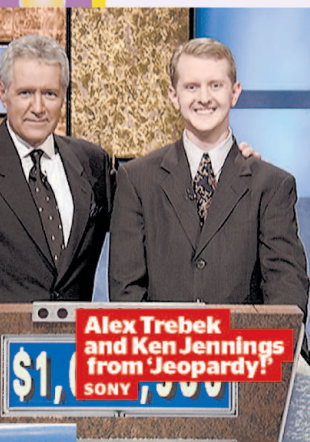

So how do winning contestants spend the money?

Thorpe Schoenle, 39, a firefighter who lives in Garfield Ridge, used the $464,000 he won on "Deal or No Deal" in 2006 to install a pool and a play-set in his backyard, take a trip to Disney World and pay for his children's education. The life-long Sox fan was recognized at a game and later asked to throw out the first pitch.

"What an amazing year in my life, as far as all the fun stuff I got to partake in," he said.

THE NEW GAME SHOW

What's the difference between game shows and reality TV? The line has blurred over the years.

Consider game shows and reality TV to be two overlapping circles where a chunk of reality TV falls into the game show circle, said Michael Niederman, chairman of the TV department at Columbia College Chicago.

"The new form of game shows—'Big Brother,' 'Survivor,' 'Amazing Race,' 'Biggest Loser,' all of these prime-time shows—they're still game shows. They're competitors playing for prizes," said Scott Sternberg, producer of "Hollywood Squares," "The Newlywed Game," and "The Gong Show."

ARE YOU GAME?

Quiz yourself on "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire?" or whiz yourself on MTV? Take RedEye's, er, not-so-scientific test to see if you're a better fit for a traditional game show or a drama-filled unscripted series like "The Real World." LEONOR VIVANCO, REDEYE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY ARIES

March 21-April 19

You're in the mood to pounce, but your partner still is finishing his or her long winter's nap. Spring fever is upon you. Too bad your significant other just wants a long snooze. A moon square is keeping the two of you on different biorhythms.

GET US ON YOUR PHONE

Need your horoscope and don't have RedEye nearby? Head to redeye.chicago.com on your mobile phone.

Taurus

April 20-May 20

An old relationship could rear its ugly head. Pluto is stirring up melodrama. Your former flame will accuse you of sleeping with her sister. Your ex-husband will scold you for stealing his favorite sweatshirt three years ago.

Gemini

May 21-June 21

You could encounter someone so beautiful that you become tongue-tied and clumsy. When you flirt with him, you won't notice the mascara running down your cheeks. When you chat with her, you'll forget that your pants are unzipped.

Cancer

June 22-July 22

A moon opposition could have you wondering what on earth you ever saw in your partner. What made you think that dating a gorgeous girl with a low IQ was a good idea? Since when is shacking up with a guy who never takes a shower a smart strategy? Geesh.

Leo

July 23-Aug. 22

You and your honey could clash over your sexual styles, thanks to Mars. You want more public displays of affection. She wants to be inside with the lights out. You crave multiple orgasms. He falls asleep after your first one. Work it out.

Virgo

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Love planet Venus has been opposite your sign, and this has given you a raging case of poor self-esteem. You're certain that you are the ugliest, stinkiest loser on the planet. The good news? You're not that bad. The bad news? You could use some improvement.

Libra

Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Neptune could inspire you to do something wild, crazy and sensual. Maybe you'll pounce on a casual friend and seduce him or her in a forceful way. Or perhaps you'll be tempted to throw an orgy at your place and invite lots of gorgeous, single people.

Scorpio

Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Your romantic situation is starting to look up, thanks to friendly Venus. You'll realize that your boyfriend isn't an idiot or that your girlfriend is a sweet, patient friend. Celebrate this positive energy shift with dinner out.

Sagittarius

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

The moon in your sign has you convinced that you are God's sole recipient of the sexiness gene. You're hot, but nobody is that hot. Don't let all that attention you've been receiving go to your head.

Capricorn

Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Sometimes you hold things inside so tightly that it makes you constipated. Mercury is encouraging you to talk things out. If you're stressed, why not share your worries with your partner? It's not up to you to solve all the world's problems, you know.

Aquarius

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You're in a frisky and friendly mood, thanks to Jupiter. If you're single, you could get cozy with someone who has only been a casual acquaintance up until now. If you're already partnered, you'll want to spend some sweaty quality time with your honey.

Pisces

Feb. 19-March 20

Venus is going direct in your sign, bringing peace and tranquility to your romantic situation. You'll feel good about whatever is happening in your life. Whether you're single, broken up, engaged or married, you'll realize that you are exactly where you need to be.

What's the value of partnership?
To Laura, it's worth 25 laps of kicking asthma.

Asthma is a serious health problem. It can cause hospitalizations, emergency room visits and the loss of everyday activities like exercise. That's why Advocate Physician Partners launched a collective initiative to improve asthma care. An Asthma Action Plan was developed for patients to promote education and self-management. Patients have more awareness, more control and are better able to recognize asthma triggers. So now, normal everyday activities can become normal again.

Working together for a healthier you. To access health and wellness information and to find a physician, visit www.advocatehealth.com/APP or call 1-800-3-ADVOCATE (1-800-323-8622).

» GOING TO A CONCERT

It must be tough being Zac Efron.

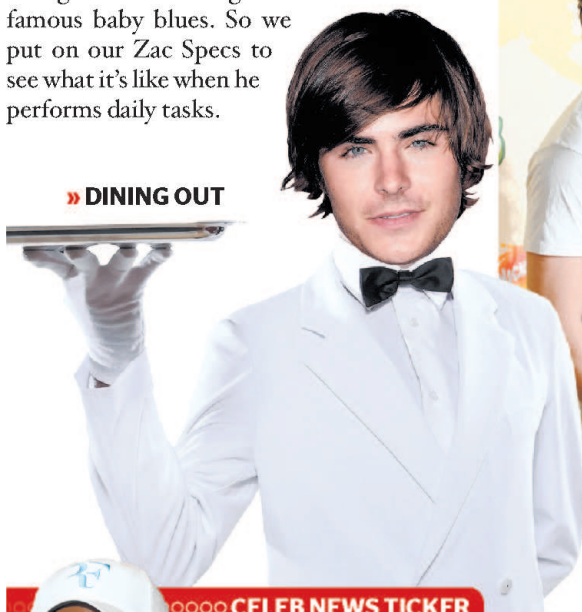

"I didn't want to be famous," the "High School Musical" star tells USA Weekend in an interview about his transition from leading boy to leading man. "I get sick of seeing my own face around."

That quote got RedEye thinking about seeing the world through Efron's famous baby blues. So we put on our Zac Specs to see what it's like when he performs daily tasks.

NOTED AND QUOTED

Over high school

Zac Efron hosted "Saturday Night Live" over the weekend, and his new movie, "17 Again," opens Friday. Oh, and he has a new viral video on funnyordle.com. Here are some choice quotes from his recent interview with USA Weekend.

"My taste is changing. I'm growing up."

"I played sports on weekends—baseball, basketball—and when I sucked at those, I started playing golf and Ping-Pong in the garage."

"I'm definitely not the best actor in the world at this point... but hopefully, with time and effort and smart decisions, that will change."

New Bears quarterback Jay Cutler broke into Chicago's social scene with a bang Friday night.

Cutler, a big country music fan, attended the Eric Church and Ashley Ray show at Joe's with teammate Greg Olsen. Later that night Cutler dined at Hub 51 and then partied at Sub 51 at a table with bottle service. There, along with Olsen, Zackary Bowman and ex-Bear Jerry Azumah, he got the rock-star treatment. The DJ threw on "Bear Down" in his honor, and the patrons went wild as Cutler led them in a chant.

"He definitely was the center of attention," an eyewitness said. "Girls were flocking to him!" Cutler continued his night out at Underground. It looks like Jay's officially a Chicago Bear now that a few of his teammates have initiated him.

At a bar across town, another Jay—Jay Lyon from MTV's "The City"—performed with his band Tamarama at The Lucky Lady on Friday night. Afterward, the reality TV star hung out at a private booth at Manor.

Lyon told people at the club that he and Whitney Port were still broken up, but he didn't rule out the chance for reconciliation in the future. (Even though he apparently is not dating Port anymore, Lyon suggested he'd be on the next season of "The City.")

After Manor, Lyon headed to RiNo.

Common

Smells like Common

Common, who is promoting his new Diesel cologne Only The Brave, chatted with me over e-mail recently about the cologne and his hometown's bid for the 2016 Olympics. He called the fragrance "very classic and inviting." He also said that his favorite part of the city is Lake Michigan and that it was "surreal" to film "Wanted" here with Angelina Jolie. As for the 2016 Games: "I believe it would be great to bring the Olympics to Chicago," Common wrote. "I think it would be a great way to honor Chicago's tradition and to embrace the world."

Lester the jester

Vik Sahay plays “Nerd Herd” tech support man Lester Patel on NBC’s “Chuck,” but he couldn’t be further from a geek in real life. Just ask him.

“No, I have no geeky tendencies,” the Canadian actor told RedEye recently. “I’m one of the coolest people in the room right now, which are me and a cat.”

Sahay eventually admitted he has his own obsessions, saying, “Well, never you mind” when asked to elaborate. Sahay, whose character is one part of the hilariously bad musical duo Jeffster on the comedy, doesn’t even play Rock Band in his spare time—or does he?

“I do many, many things in the privacy of my own home that I never intend to be public,” he joked. “Let’s leave it at that.”

» “Chuck” returns at 7 p.m. Monday on NBC. For more from the interview, go to redeyechicago.com/showpatrol.

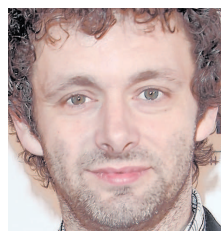

Bad news Billy Bob

Days after comparing Canada’s fans to gravy-less mashed potatoes in an interview, Billy Bob Thornton’s band nixed the rest of its Canadian tour, the AP reports. The Boxmasters opened for Willie Nelson on Thursday in Toronto, where they were booed. By Friday, Nelson’s Web site said the band was canceling the rest of their Canadian dates, citing “the flu.” Hmm, interesting timing. The band is scheduled to resume Tuesday in Stamford, Conn., and is set to appear on “Jimmy Kimmel Live” April 21. AP PHOTO

Speed freaks

Buckle up for yet another “Fast & Furious” movie, because a new installment with Vin Diesel and Paul Walker is a go, Walker said in a radio interview, according to “Access Hollywood.” “This was supposed to be it ... but without question, Vin and I will be coming back. We’re making the fifth one, and we’re going to Brazil,” he said.

Sheen

Putting the Sheen on ‘Twilight’

He’s played the interviewer who brought down Richard Nixon and a Lycan (werewolf) in the “Underworld” movies, so Michael Sheen should have no problem playing a super-powerful vampire leader in “New Moon,” the “Twilight” sequel. The actor will portray Aro, Variety reports, one of the leaders of the Italian Volturi clan. He can hear what people are thinking just by touching them. Creepy.

Stop signs

Matthew McConaughey has some sage advice for would-be ladies’ men: Stop short. The actor related to Men’s Journal some advice his own father gave him, the New York Post reports. “If you ever make a move [on a woman], and you feel the slightest bit of resistance, stop. ... You do that, and you know what? Women do come back. ... And eventually you don’t have to stop.”

THE DIGIT

$34 million

How much “Hannah Montana: The Movie” earned in movie theaters over the weekend. Teen queen Miley Cyrus’ latest movie drew $17.3 million on Friday for the biggest opening day ever for a G-rated live-action movie.

Billy Corgan, describing himself based on his musical persona in a blog post on smashingpumpkins.com.

“Part-alien, part-human, part-robot, part-star-crossed lover and part-mercury filled.”
